

Unforgettable by Charlie Maclean

Unforgettable, Charlie Maclean's sparkling debut novel, is a sexy, gritty tale of present day star-crossed lovers.

A chance encounter throws together Alex, a restless dreamer and unhappy lawyer searching for love, and Julia, a headstrong actress determined to succeed. Unforgettable then splits and alternates between Alex and Julia's breathlessly real love affair, across London and beyond, and Alex's downbeat life in Camden without her. In both lives, Alex's troubled past threatens true love and a happy future. Can he overcome his greatest fears and win Julia's heart or will he lose her forever?

One moment. Two lives. One decision.

Unforgettable is a contemporary romantic fiction novel – unusually, with a male protagonist – by London and Brighton-based Charlie Maclean. An exciting new voice in fiction, his dynamic writing style delivers a compelling story with a sharp wit, a dreamlike quality and an irresistible twist.

About the author and the book:

This literary-romantic drama is Charlie Maclean's first full length novel. However, he is currently writing his next book, this time set in Brighton. As a passionate storyteller, he has also drafted TV and films scripts.

Unforgettable's uniqueness stems from its male point of view combined with a focus on self-discovery and a split story. The novel explores the idea that life can turn on chance events but, ultimately, it's our choice what we make of it. This highly compelling premise combined with its universal themes of love, loss, fate and the possibility of redemption, set to make Unforgettable the stand-out debut of 2016.
